

Maternal Health: Challenges and Reality for People of Color.

SPEAKER

SCIHONOR DEVOTION

eCID, CLC, MCHS

SciHonor Devotion, is a dedicated practitioner in the field of reproductive health, whose journey began 25 years ago with her own pregnancy experience. Inspired by this, she pursued formal training as a birth doula in 2001 and has since expanded her expertise to include roles as a postpartum doula, childbirth educator, homebirth midwife assistant, certified lactation counselor, maternal-child health specialist, and doula trainer.

Currently, she is a senior midwifery student supporting families in community birth settings. With a commitment to excellence, SciHonor actively contributes to advancing maternal healthcare by participating in various committees and workgroups across the state.

She serves as the Founding Director of Earth's Natural Touch: Birth Care & Beyond, the largest Black-Owned Doula training organization and collective in the NYC Tri-State and New England areas. She is deeply committed to reducing disparities in infant and maternal health, particularly within marginalized communities.
